

I pay for a phone in my home for MY convenience...not anyone else's. I think it's a shame that we have to go to these measures to prevent other people from stealing my time everytime I have to answer one of their calls, or from stealing my electricity every time my answering machine kicks in because of one of their calls. When someone physically breaks into another person's home it is considered a crime...isn't telemarketing the same thing as breaking into someone's home? I think it is.
